Driving BrightTV's Subscription Growth

Viewership Analytics & Strategic Initiatives for the Financial Year

Presented by: Quincy Mmako

Project Overview

This presentation provides an overview of the key areas that can assist the CVM team in achieving their mandate to grow the company's subscription base. The key areas focused on are:

- User & Usage Trends.
- Consumption Drivers.
- Performance Optimization.
- Strategic Growth Initiatives.

Maximizing the Base Through Targeted Retention and Expansion

The Mandate

Grow BrightTV's subscription base and maximize viewer retention for the current financial year.

The Core Insights

1. Our engagement engine relies heavily on Youth Adults in Gauteng and the Western Cape watching weekend sports.
2. We face a severe subscription retention risk on Mondays, with viewership plummeting 42% from Friday peaks.

The Strategic Path Forward

Re-energize low-consumption days with targeted programming and launch tailored demographic and regional growth campaigns.

Note to CVM Team: All time-based analytics in this brief have been localized to South African (SA) time for immediate operational planning.

Defining the Core BrightTV Subscriber

Key Takeaway: Growth initiatives must prioritize the cultural and viewing preferences of Black Young Adults and Adults.

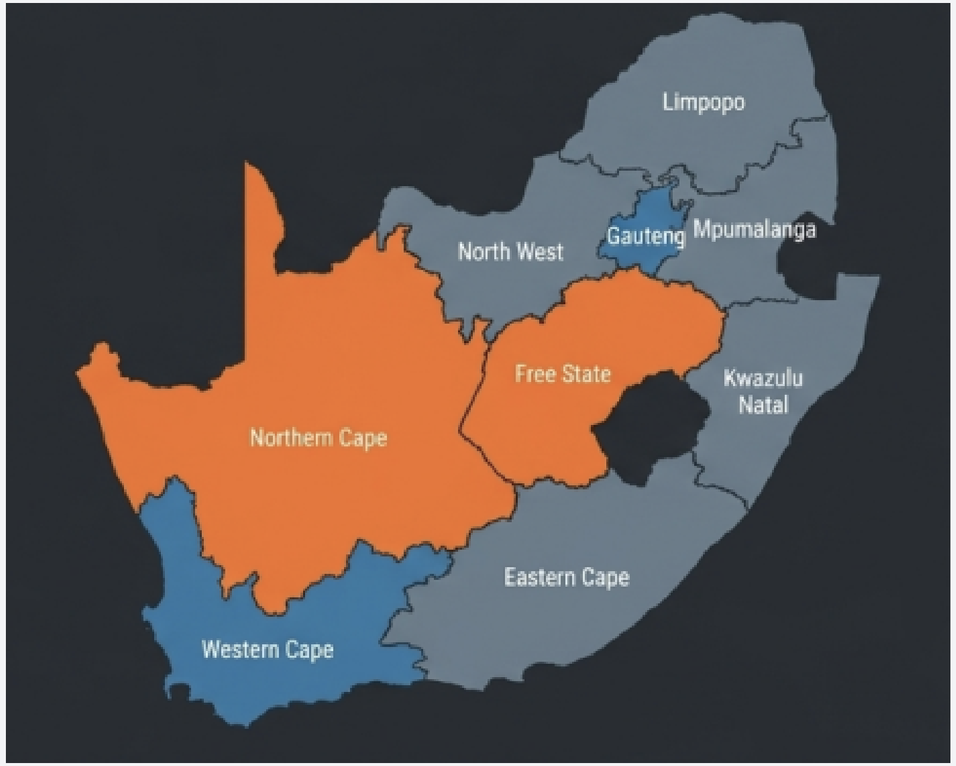
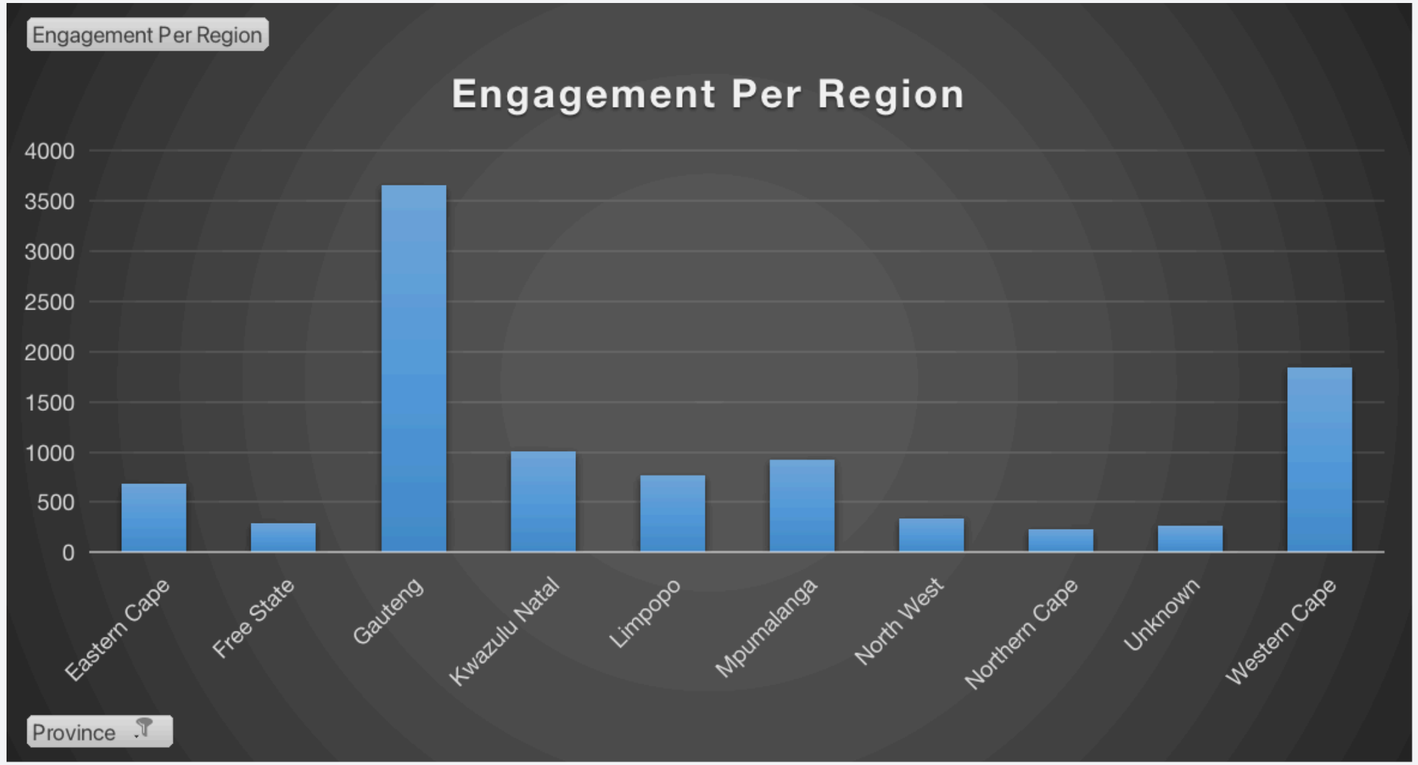
Geographic Engagement is Highly Concentrated

The Strongholds: Gauteng (>3600 sessions) and Western Cape (>1800 sessions) dominate engagement.

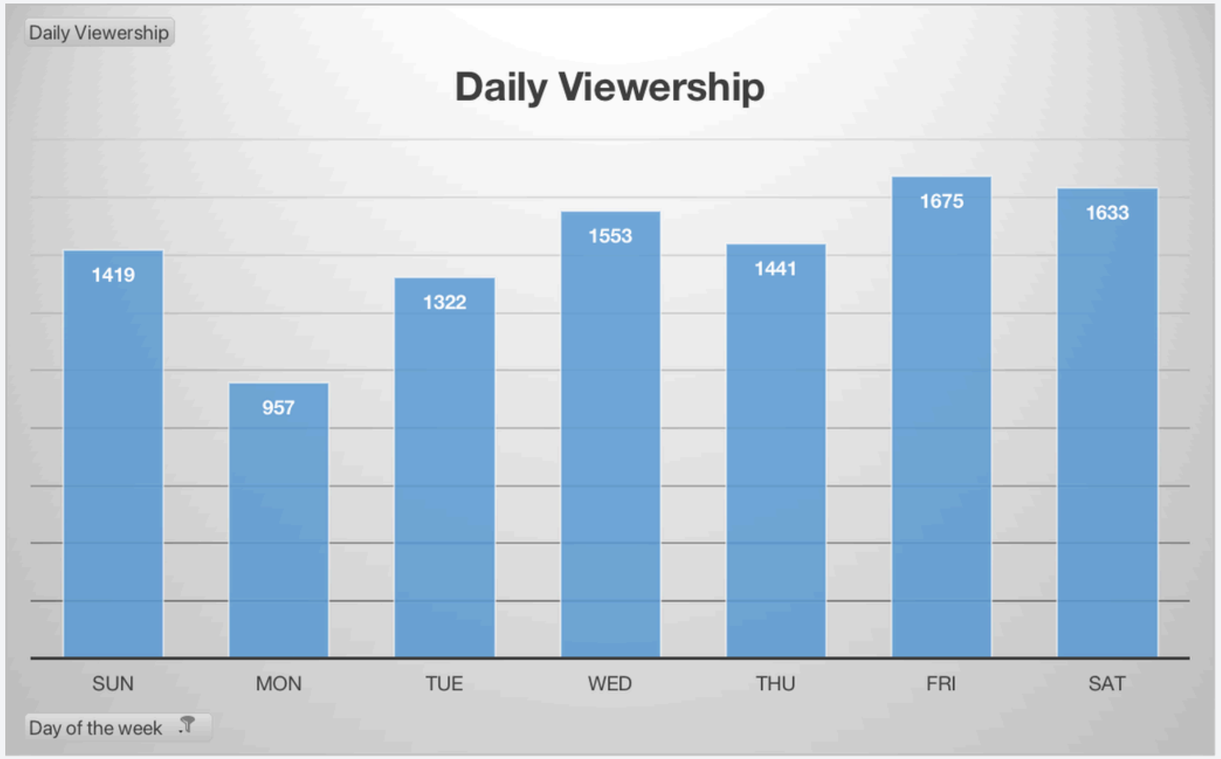
The Untapped Potential: Free State (~300 sessions) and Northern Cape (~200 sessions) represent near-zero penetration.





Key Takeaway: While we must defend our Gauteng/WC base, net-new subscription growth requires aggressive geographic expansion into secondary provinces.

The Weekend Peak
and the Severe Monday Slump



The Retention Risk: Monday experiences a drastic and immediate drop-off, falling to just 957 viewers.

The Upward Ramp: Viewership builds momentum throughout the week, achieving massive peaks on Fridays (1675) and Saturdays (1633).

Key Takeaway: Mondays present our biggest vulnerability. Subscribers who tune out on Monday are at higher risk of churn. We must build a bridge across the early-week slump.

The Dominant Anchors

- Supersport Live Events: 1662 viewers
- ICC Cricket World Cup 2011: 1465 viewers

Viewership is heavily skewed by major live events.

Secondary Perfomers

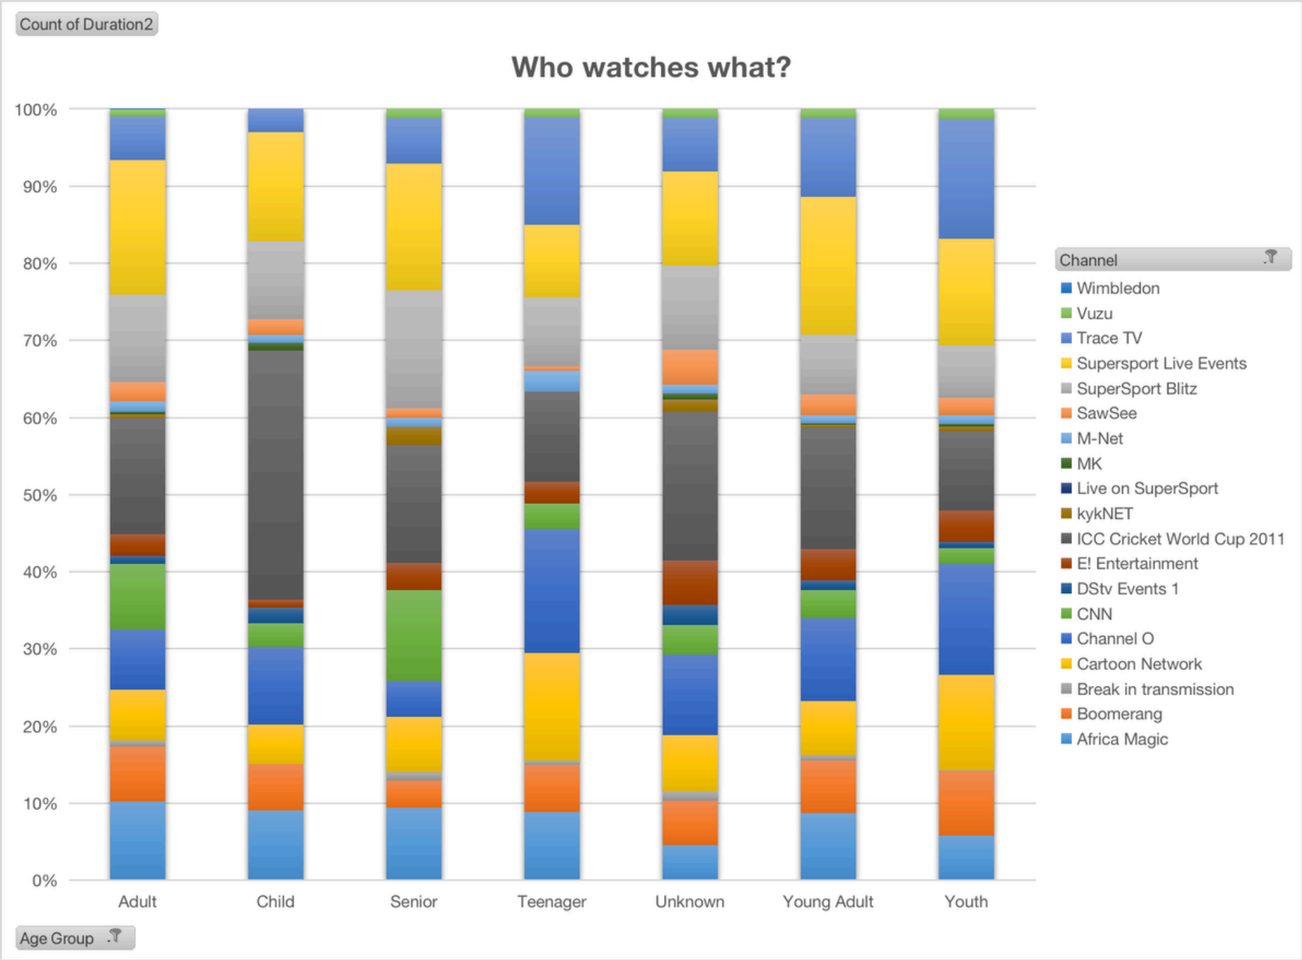
- Channel O: 1050 viewers
- Trace TV: 952 viewers
- Africa Magic: 859 viewers

Entertainment channels show solid but secondary performance compared to tentpole sports.

Key Takeaway: Sports programming is the undisputed driver of acquisition and retention, creating the Friday/Saturday spikes.

The Formula for Engagement:

Young Adults and Sports



The Nexus of Value

Cross-referencing demography with consumption reveals singular truth: BrightTV's core engine is Young Adults consuming Live Sports.

Behavioral Lock-in

This demographic relies on BrightTV specifically for event-driven viewing. Their massive 4118 minutes of watch time is highly concentrated around these specific broadcasts.

Key Takeaway: Any structural changes to programming or bundling must protect this nexus at all costs while finding ways to extend their watching time into non-sports categories.

Two Factors Drive Consumption Behaviour

Factor 1: Event-Driven Gravity

Major sporting events act as massive cultural gravitational pulls. Subscribers do not browse; they log in with intent for specific, high-stakes broadcasts (e.g., ICC Cricket World Cup).

Factor 2: Leisure Economics

Weekend availability aligns perfectly with the long-duration nature of sports broadcasting. Subscribers have the discretionary time required to consume multi-hour sessions on Fridays and Saturdays.

The Implication: Without tentpole sports to pull them in, and without weekend leisure time, the default subscriber behaviour is to disengage.

The Strategic Framework for FY Growth

Defend & Retain
(Fixing the Leaks)

1. Tactic 1
- Optimise underperforming days by injecting targeted entertainment to cure the Monday Slump.
- The intervention to this is to repurpose the highest-performing non-sports content to anchor Mondays. Specifically promote Channel 0 and Africa Magic.

2. Tactic 2
- Maximize Core LTV by launching demographic-specific content bundles.
- The intervention to this is to create targeted, high-value subscription tiers combining Supersport Blitz/Live Events with music and lifestyle channels like Channel O and Trace TV.

Expand & Acquire
(Growing the Base)

3. Tactic 3
- Unlock latent geographies with aggressive regional activation campaigns.
- The intervention to this is to launch localized, aggressive marketing and acquisition campaigns specifically designed for the Northern Cape and Free State.

Immediate Next Steps for CVM Execution

1. Programming Alignment

Collaborate with the broadcast team to model the financial impact of shifting prime Africa Magic and Channel O blocks to Monday evenings.

2. Product Scoping

Develop pricing models for the 'Young Adult Action Bundle' combining sports and lifestyle content.

3. Marketing Allocation

Carve out localized FY budget for test-acquisition campaigns targeting the Free State and Northern Cape.
